Pontotoc FB member receives Historic Angus Herd Award

The American Angus Association has awarded Eldon Flinn of Red Tank Ranch, Fittstown, with the Historic Angus Herd Award for continued ownership and production of Angus cattle for more than 50 years.

Flinn, a Pontotoc County Farm Bureau member, started the herd in 1954. As a sophomore in high school, he purchased 12 registered Angus heifers for an average of $235 per head. He also purchased his first Angus bull for his 88-acre ranch.

Today, Flinn continues to operate the herd, which now numbers approximately 100 Angus cows on the 1,100-acre ranch.

NATIONAL WESTERN CHAMPIONS

The Kingfisher FFA team won the National Western Livestock Judging Contest in Denver in mid January. The National Western Show attracts the best teams from across the nation to compete for the national title. The same team was the junior FFA champion at Oklahoma Farm Bureau's State Fair of Oklahoma Judging Contest in September. OFB awarded the team a $750 cash prize at the Tulsa State Fair in October after it qualified to be the state's representative to the National Western. Members of the team pictured following their victory at the Oklahoma State Fair Contest, from left, were Matthew Walta, Katie Lippoldt, Kaitlin Pritchett and Spencer Struck. It was the second year in a row a Kingfisher FFA won the team title. Since the same team cannot participate twice, this team of three sophomores and a freshman was assembled. Walta was the high individual at the Denver contest and Lippoldt was the 10th high individual. The team won the beef, swine and reasons categories on its way to the title.

Commission adopts overlay plan for 918 area code

Existing telephone customers in eastern Oklahoma don't have to worry about their area code changing. They get to keep the 918 area code.

New customers or those adding additional lines in the 918 area code will be assigned a 539 area code beginning April 1, 2011.

All local calls will require 10-digit dialing, with a permissive calling period beginning Aug. 7, 2010, during which customers can complete local calls by using seven digits or 10 digits. This will give customers a chance to familiarize themselves to the new calling pattern that goes into effect March 5, 2011.

The cost of calls will not be affected. Services such as 911, 411 and 211 will not be affected either.

This is all part of an overlay plan adopted by the Oklahoma Corporation Commission instead of a split.

A split would have taken the present area served by the 918 area code and assigned a new area code to part of the region and allowed the other to keep the old area code. That was what happened in 1997 when the 405 area code was split and the 580 area code was instituted.

Corporation Commission Chairman Bob Anthony called the overlay plan more equitable, unlike the 405-580 split when customers felt there were winners and losers in the plan. At that time, technology to implement an overlay plan was not practical.

The overlay plan also is less expensive. An overlay is estimated to cost $2.4 million while a split would cost an estimated $9 million plus additional expenses of changing signs, stationary and advertising.

Increased consumer demand for home and office phones, cellular and PCS phone, lines for pagers, fax machines, modems, internet access and new local providers resulted in fewer available telephone numbers in the 918 area code. It is estimated the 918 area code will run out of numbers in 2012.

It was estimated that telephone numbers in the Oklahoma 918 area code would be depleted by 2012. The Corporation Commission approved an overlay plan for that area and will assign 539 area codes to new users beginning April 1, 2011.

New credit card rules here

New rules passed by Congress are designed to benefit consumers who use credit cards.

Although using credit cards is now the norm for most consumers, they can cost users a lot of money in fees and interest if they do not understand their credit card's terms and conditions.

In the summer of 2009, Congress passed the Credit CARD Act, which puts new rules in place to benefit the consumer. More changes take effect this year, said Eileen St. Pierre, Oklahoma State University Cooperative Extension personal finance specialist.

"One of the biggest changes made last summer was making creditors provide written notice to consumers at least 45 days before increasing an interest rate or making a significant change to the account terms," St. Pierre said. "Consumers have the right to cancel the credit card before the increase or change goes into effect. In addition, credit card companies now must allow at least 21 days between the time a statement is mailed and when the payment is due."

Most of the act's provisions went into effect Feb. 22. For consumers who carry a balance, credit card companies must first apply payments to the balances that carry the highest interest rate. Double-cycle billing is no longer allowed. If your interest rate is raised because you were late making a payment, the rate will revert back to the original rate if you make the next six monthly payments on time.

"Your credit card statement is also going to look a lot different," she said. "Your monthly bill will include an estimate of how long it will take to pay off the bill if you just make the minimum payment. There will be a year-to-date summary of overdrafts, fees and interest so you can see what your credit card is really costing you. Changes in terms notice will now be on the front page of the bill, not in a separate mailing that often just gets thrown away."

Under the new guidelines, credit card companies will no longer be able to target consumers under the age of 21 unless the consumer submits a written application containing the signature of a co-signer with means to repay any debt incurred on the account, or provides financial information indicating an independent means of repaying any debt.

While the provisions under the Credit CARD Act of 2009 greatly benefit consumers, credit card companies will be looking for new ways to make the profits they used to make in the past. The days of no annual fee may be gone for many consumers. Credit card companies may impose a fee for customers who do not use their card or if they don't charge a minimum amount per year. If you have a credit card, use it and pay it off right away.

"It's vital for consumers to read all of the material that comes with their credit card statements," St. Pierre said. "If you see new fees on your statement, call your credit card company and ask for an explanation. The more money you end up paying your credit card company in fees is less money in your own pocket."

Pesticide collection locations announced

The dates and locations for the remainder of the year have been set for the unwanted pesticide collection program, according to the Oklahoma Extension Service's Pesticide Reports.

Three disposals dates were held in March, but four are scheduled in November.

The Alva Farmers Coop in Alva will be the site for a collection program on Nov. 9.

The Farmers Union Coop in Altus will be the site for a collection program on Nov. 11.

The Kay County Fairgrounds in Blackwell will be the site for a collection program on Nov. 16.

The last scheduled collection program is set for Nov. 18 at Helena Chemical in Coweta.

The program will be from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. at each location.

The programs are open to commercial, non-commercial, private applicators and farmers/ranchers and others with pesticides.

Double-digit decreases in sales are expected for four-wheel-drive tractors in 2010 following a relatively flat business in 2009, according to the Association of Equipment Manufacturers. Sales of tractors and combines are predicted to start rebounding in 2011 and 2012.

percent, followed by flat growth in 2011 and 4 percent growth in 2012.

For tractors in the 40- to 100-HP range, U.S. sales are expected to decrease 6 percent in 2010 and then gain 9 percent in 2011 and 8 percent in 2012.

Sales of under 40-HP two-wheel-drive tractors in 2010 are expected to decrease 8 percent. Here, too, improvement is then foreseen – 2011 growth of 8 percent and 2012 growth of 11 percent.

AEM survey predicts a slow 2010 for most ag machinery

Agricultural machinery manufacturers anticipate overall continued weakness in U.S. and Canadian tractor sales in 2010, according to the annual “outlook” survey of the Association of Equipment Manufacturers (AEM).

For all sizes of two-wheel tractors, however, the declines are expected to be less steep than 2009 losses. Double-digit decreases are expected for four-wheel-drive tractors, following relatively flat business in 2009. Combine sales are predicted to drop in the double digits for 2010 after 2009 sales growth. Sales of tractors and combines are then predicted to start rebounding through 2011 and 2012.

For other types of farm-related equipment covered in the AEM survey, overall 2010 demand for most products in the U.S. and Canada is expected to improve after 2009 business declines. All categories are predicted to be in the plus column for 2011 and 2012.

AEM is the North American-based international trade group for the off-road equipment manufacturing industry, and it annually polls its agricultural machinery manufacturers on sales predictions for a variety of farm-related equipment.

“The recession reached the agricultural sector in 2009, and the drop in equipment sales in most categories is attributed to a combination of the fall in commodity prices, significant drops in net farm income, the tightening of credit throughout the ag equipment distribution channel, and the overall reduction in economic confidence,” said AEM Vice President of Agricultural Services Charlie O’Brien.

“The recession is expected to continue to drive negative growth rates in many equipment categories in 2010. However, it is important to keep in mind that the larger equipment has been coming off of some very good production years, specifically the 100 HP tractors, which were at a 25-year high watermark in 2008,” he continued.

Combine sales in 2010 are expected to decrease 12 percent in the U.S., followed by a 7 percent drop in 2011 and no growth in 2012.

Sales of four-wheel-drive tractors in 2010 are predicted to decline 19 percent while sales in 2010 for two-wheel-drive tractors in the 100-HP and over range are expected to drop 9

Oklahoma company gets OCAST grant for coffee roaster

U.S. Roasters Corp./Roasters Exchange in Oklahoma City is developing a revolutionary new coffee bean roaster, The Revelation.

The Revelation is not only energy efficient and produces far less air emissions compared to existing units, but it also produces beans that have the potential to be nationally competitive at providing better flavor than other roasters on the market.

Awarded a $209,833 matching grant from the Oklahoma Applied Research Support Program within the Oklahoma Center for the Advancement of Science and Technology, Roasters Exchange will work with Oklahoma State University’s Robert M. Kerr Food & Agricultural Products Center to make slight design modifications and verify energy and pollution efficiency claims. The total project budget for the two-year grant, including contributions from the corporate sponsor, is $422,233.

said Dan Jolliff, Roasters Exchange president. "We began development and production of the Revelation Roaster in 2006 to meet demands of energy efficiency while maintaining quality."

Dr. Tim Bowser, FAPC food process engineer, is leading the project research and technical components.

"We expect that the same technologies that make The Revelation coffee roaster successful may be applied to other food and agricultural products that are roasted, such as coco beans, macadamias, peanuts, almonds, sunflower seeds, soybeans and wood chips," Bowser said. "Roasters Exchange is committed to continuous improvement of their products and to expanding their markets."

This grant allows Roasters Exchange and FAPC to develop a high-efficiency coffee roaster that will appeal to national and international markets and will result in new jobs and new revenue sources for Oklahoma.

"We estimate that the U.S. alone has installed 2,000 to 4,000 small batch roasters, and we expect 500 of these to be replaced with Revelation models resulting in $30,000,000 increased sales," Jolliff said. "A smaller amount of large batch roasters are installed in the U.S., which we estimate at 700 units. Half of these would be replaced in 5-10 years with the average sale per replacement unit at $500,000. This alone could be $175,000,000 in additional sales."

This revolutionary new coffee bean roaster is being developed by an Oklahoma City company.
